Local Soil Projects Are to Be Inspected by 1,000

Visitors From 15 Counties Will Be Received Locally

Special Visiting Days Announced for May 21 and May 27

FARM UNITS VISIT

4-H Club Members, Smith-Hughes Instructors, to Be in Parties

The Hope Soil Conservation Service is preparing to receive more than 1,000 visitors from 15 surrounding counties during the period from May 15 through May 29, according to Craig Rosborough project manager.

Friday, May 21, and Thursday, May 27, have been set aside as "Special Visiting Days" during the two week period. On these two days groups of 4-H club members, Future Farmers of America chapters, Smith-Hughes instructors, county farm agents, and farmers and business men are expected to make specially conducted tours of the Soil Conservation Service area. It is pointed out by Mr. Rosborough that persons who cannot come on the two special days send a post card to the local project office setting out the day during the visiting period that they will want to make a farm tour.

To Inspect Farms
All groups or individuals will be conducted to the various farms in the project area where the different phases of the co-operated erosion control program will be explained. These trips will give the visitors an opportunity to see just how the soil and moisture conservation program operates on a field and farm unit basis.

More than 15,000 acres in the Hope project area, representing 90 farm owners and operators, are under a five-year co-operative agreement with the Service. Contour cultivation, strip crops, terraces, vegetated terrace outlets and outlet channels, meadow outlet strips, wildlife plantations, and gully control are among the important phases of the complete erosion control program which will be seen and fully explained to project visitors.

Mr. Rosborough points out that co-operators with the Service in the Hope project area have been responsible for the widespread use of erosion control measures and practices on many farms in this section of Arkansas which are not inside the project area. Co-operators, in carrying out their parts of the coordinated program, have shown other farm owners and operators just how practical it is to institute erosion control programs of their own farms.

Control of Rainfall
The entire program of the Soil Conservation Service is directed toward that control of rainfall which would reduce (a) runoff, (b) erosion of agricultural and grazing lands, (c) the covering of fertile valley lands with comparatively unproductive erosional debris, and (d) the filling of stream channels, reservoirs and ditches with the products of erosion. Such control will have an important direct effect toward reducing the volume of water entering streams, thus minimizing flood hazards.

"The desired control," Mr. Rosborough says, "is secured by the re-forestation of excessively eroded land from cultivation; the practical use of various adaptations of thick growing vegetation, and the use of engineering structures and mechanical procedures where applicable."

Liquor Referendum Near in Tennessee

Senate Speaker Forecasts Favorable Vote to Submit Issue

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—The liquor question bubbled up again Wednesday in the Tennessee legislature following defeat of a local option bill in the house.

The house steering committee set for action Thursday a proposal to have a statewide referendum on repeal of the state's 28-year-old dry laws. A companion bill also was introduced in the senate.

Senate Speaker Byron Pope forecast that the bill would pass and that the state would vote wet. In that event, he expressed the opinion Governor Browning would call an extra session of the legislature to take action on the liquor issue. The sixth Thursday after passage of the bill is fixed as the time for the referendum.

Dooley's Ferry Oil Test Under Way

Contract Depth of Moore-Porterfield No. 1 Reported 4,500 Feet

Drilling operations at the E. H. Moore, Inc.-Porterfield No. 1 oil test, 21-24-25, 10 miles southwest of Hope, began Wednesday. Contract depth is reported to be 4,500 feet.

The Moore firm is reported to be one of the largest independent oil operators in Oklahoma with headquarters at Tulsa.

The newest oil venture gives Hempstead county three wildcat tests, the Davidson-Smith test four miles north-east of Washington, which is temporarily shut down due to lack of water supply.

The Washington test, reported to be at a depth of 1,736 feet, is financed by Illinois interests. Drilling is expected to be resumed within the next two weeks.

The third test is the G. P. Birdwell wildcat on the W. W. Duckett land, 24-13-13, four miles southeast of Hope. The Birdwell test has been hampered by difficulty in reaching the location with fuel oil.

Drilling is expected to begin at the Boettcher Oil & Gas Co., test two miles from Okay and six miles from Mineral Springs within the next few days. The derrick has been completed. Ohls Brothers has been given the drilling contract, reported to be 3,000 feet.

The test, in southern Howard county, is in the northwest quarter of the northwest of 28-11-27.

Drummed-Up Sale Fixed Tax 'Loss'?

Government Accuses Raskob, DuPont of Making Fictitious Sales

NEW YORK—(AP)—A tiny double cross in red ink found on certain card index records in Pierre S. du Pont's tin-box ledger of securities owned in 1929, became a key point Wednesday in the income tax case against du Pont and John J. Raskob.

Placing the 1929 and the 1930 ledgers of the Wilmington, Del., industrialist into evidence, government lawyers contended the cross-marks—resembling the cross used in the game of "tick-tack-toe"—was du Pont's method of "ear-marking" the stocks he purchased from Raskob in the sales back-and-forth following the 1929 panic, following which the millionaires established deductible losses on their 1929 income tax returns.

Ralph T. Ellis, office assistant for du Pont in Wilmington, testified he was "positive" the markings were not placed on the card index records at the time the securities were purchased from Raskob. Instead he believed the marks were not placed on the cards, until in 1935, after the government instituted its action to collect $617,316 from du Pont and $1,026,340 from Raskob in alleged deficiency in their 1929 tax.

The government contends the sales were fictitious and were accompanied by a "positive" understanding, and that the stocks were "ear-marked" so each would get his original blocks of securities back. In support of this contention, Mason B. Lanning, chief of the government's lawyers in the case, introduced the ledgers into evidence during his examination of Ellis, who has been on the witness stand nearly four days.

James S. Y. Ivins, chief counsel for du Pont—whose case is being heard separately from Raskob's, and is up first—contended no objection, saying: "If it will facilitate Mr. Lanning's fishing expedition, I have no objections."

Alibi Witness in Still Raid to Face Probe for Perjury

Federal Judge Ragon Openly Accuses Boyd Plumley, Patmos Farmer

GAVE NEGRO ALIBI

Plumley Testified Negro Liggins Was Chopping Wood for Him

A Department of Justice investigation of testimony given by Boyd Plumley, white farmer of Patmos, in defense of Buddie Liggins, negro still worker, was ordered by Federal Judge Hearnall Ragon at Texarkana late Wednesday afternoon.

The judge discharged the jury trying Liggins after they reported they were unable to reach a verdict. It was reported they stood 11 to 1 for conviction.

"This is the worst miscarriage of justice I have ever witnessed in my years on the bench," declared Judge Ragon, who added, "I cannot understand why you gentlemen are unable to agree inasmuch as the evidence is as plain as is this."

"You have the testimony of Federal Officer Jess Quillin that he stood seven or eight feet away and watched this negro, Liggins, working about the still. There is also evidence from the still owner himself, Ike Taylor, that Liggins worked for him at the liquor manufacturing plant."

Judge Orders Investigation
"Mr. District Attorney," said the judge, addressing Duke Fredrick, a deputy prosecutor for the government, "I want you to call on the department of justice and have them conduct a complete investigation into this case, especially the testimony given by this man Plumley. In addition I want your office to make a thorough probe of the matter."

"I'm frank to say to you gentlemen of the jury that I am surprised that such a thing should happen. I don't think I ever saw a plainer case and I personally, am convinced of the defendant's guilt."

"I shouldn't say this but I will I think Plumley perjured himself in the testimony he gave in behalf of the negro. So convinced of that fact am I that I want this investigation made so there will be no doubt," concluded Judge Ragon as he substituted a clenched fist for a gavel to pound on his desk.

Gives Negro an Alibi
Plumley testified that Liggins was chopping wood all afternoon with him at the time Officer Quillin and ex-State Ranger Earl May raided an outfit in Hempstead county, near Patmos.

Liggins went on the stand and denied that he ran from the still as the officers made their raid. Previously Officer Quillin told the jury that he stood seven or eight feet from the negro, recognized him and watched him work at the still.

Taylor, negro, who admitted ownership of the still, took the stand for the government and said that he had hired Liggins to work for him at the outfit and paid him off in whiskey at the rate of half a gallon for each barrel of mash that was run through the cooker.

After Taylor testified that he was the owner of the still Judge Ragon ordered an instructed verdict of "not guilty" returned on two counts against Liggins, charging ownership of the still and fermenting mash. This left only the working-at-a-still charge against him.

It was on that third count that one of the 12 jurors who deliberated on the case could not bring himself to cast a vote of "guilty."

Jurors who were discharged after the mistrial was declared were R. L. Vaughn, Bradley, W. Joplin, Texarkana; Julius Garner, Nashville; T. L. Henderson, Nashville; G. T. Cavin, Texarkana; G. E. Harris, Texarkana; R. W. Wiley, Emmett; D. W. Gladney, Lewisville; Alger Merrell, Jr., Nashville; Ralph Barnes, Prescott; A. J. Offenhausser, Texarkana; and J. T. Leeper, Gillham.

Tear-Gas Hurlled at Steel Strikers

One Hurt, 27,000 Are Idle at Jones & Laughlin Mills

By the Associated Press
Police hurled tear-gas into a shouting crowd of pickets Thursday at the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation plant in Aliquippa, Pa., where the nation's first major steel strike in 19 years is on.

One man was injured. Approximately 27,000 workers at the corporation's mills in Aliquippa and Pittsburgh were idle.

Conditions were peaceful except for minor disturbances occurring as non-union men attempted to enter the mills through the picket lines.

The strike threatened to spread.

Strike Begins
PITTSBURGH, Pa.—(AP)—Thousands of union steel workers picketed the giant plants of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. Wednesday night, in the first major steel strike since John L. Lewis began his drive to organize the nation's mill men into one big union.

The strike went into effect promptly at 11 p. m.—the first move in the campaign of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to obtain written collective bargaining contracts with the big independent steel producers of the country, employing approximately 200,000 men.

Cheers from the picket lines greeted union members on the early night shifts who walked from the mills in Pittsburgh and nearby Aliquippa, Pa., in answer to the strike order of Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Committee.

Murray ordered the walkout after a two-hour conference with Chairman H. E. Lewis of the corporation failed to effect an agreement on the union's demand for a signed collective bargaining contract.

The corporation said it had offered to sign a contract if an identical contract could be granted to non-union workers among its 27,000 employees.

Cities to Inspect Autos; 50-Cent Fee

State Police Would Require Safety Examinations Twice a Year

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The State Police Commission voted Wednesday to authorize cities of the first and second class to maintain official state automobile inspection stations, provided in the Moore highways regulations act of 1937.

The new law, promulgating rules and regulations governing traffic on Arkansas highways, becomes effective June 9. It requires each automobile owner to have his vehicle inspected by an official state testing station at least twice a year.

These testing stations will receive inspections fees of not to exceed 50 cents for each examination.

The Police Commission voted to give preference to all applications submitted by municipalities for authority to operate the stations. The resolution, authorizing approval of applications submitted by cities of the first and second class, said that where cities qualify as operators of the testing stations, no other permits would be issued in the particular counties.

Commission members said many advantages would accrue from municipal operation of stations. W. S. Atkins pointed out that by licensing cities to operate testing stations, "the commission would have gone as far as it could to eliminate all profit from the inspections."

Supt. Gray Albright of the State Police said such a move would have "many advantages from the point of view of the State Police." It would greatly reduce the work of the State Police, he said, and "would enlist the aid of all local authorities in enforcement of the act."

"We expect to enforce this law," he warned. He predicted enforcement of the law would do as much to decrease the number of highway accidents in Arkansas as any other one thing that could be devised.

House Committee Favors 1½ Billion for Work Relief

Administration Believes Entire House Will Uphold Committee

WILL REDUCE JOBS

Hopkins Says New Total of 1,730,000 Means WPA Cut of 525,000

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The house appropriations committee overrode economy demands Thursday and recommended a 1½-billion dollar appropriation for work relief in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Administration leaders expressed confidence that the house would approve the full amount when the measure comes up next week.

Harry Hopkins, Work Progress Administrator, testified that the 1½-billion-dollar appropriation would provide jobs for an average of 1,730,000 workers throughout the next fiscal year.

That would necessitate, he added, the dropping of 525,000 persons now working for the WPA.

Congressmen who earlier this session were demanding action on a national flood control plan said privately Thursday there was "no chance" that a "substantial" appropriation would be voted toward the construction of the 300 million dollars worth of projects approved last year.

President Roosevelt last week asked for a delay in new flood control legislation until the next session.

Vote for Dam

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The current movement to curb federal spending for action on flood control in the senate Wednesday by a 46-to-2 vote, authorizing construction of $112,000,000 TVA dam at Gilbertsville, Ky.

The ballot ended a day and a half of heated debate on spending. On the roll call the bulk of the Democratic majority approved an early start on construction of the dam, expected to require an annual outlay of $15,000,000 until completed.

The senate then passed the deficiency bill carrying appropriations of $81,646,443 and sent it back to the house for action on amendments. One of the amendments, if concurred in by the house, would permit the Tennessee Valley Authority to begin construction of the dam during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, out of its $40,000,000 general appropriation. No specific sum was carried for the dam but TVA officials estimated $2,700,000 could be allotted to the project.

Broken Propellor Is Hindenburg Clue

Possible Explosion Cause, But May Have Struck the Ground

LAKEHURST, N. J.—(AP)—The theory that a propellor blade may have broken off and pierced the fabric covering of the dirigible Hindenburg, thus starting the hydrogen explosion, was considered Wednesday night by a Commerce Department board investigating the cause of the disaster in which 35 persons died.

Inspecting the wreckage at the close of the day's hearing, the board found pieces of a wooden propellor blade and announced they would call a wood expert in an attempt to put them together and determine which of the Zeppelin's 16 blades they were from. Discovery of the fragments followed questioning today by which the board sought to learn whether a "cracking" sound before the explosion might have been caused by a piece of wood hurled through the ship's frame.

The board indicated that it would again view photographs in an effort to learn whether all the propellers were intact before the dirigible struck the ground, the pieces of blade, little charred by fire, were found within the wreckage. Flung through the ship's envelope, they might have hit electric wires and caused a spark, the board theorized. Another view was that the wooden bits may have been thrown inward by impact with the ground.

Before finding the pieces of blade the board disclosed that it had narrowed to four the possible causes of the catastrophe, but it refused to reveal them.

A sabotage theory—one of the many advanced since the disaster—was dealt a blow and explosive experts that they had found no evidence to indicate any form of explosive figured in the blast. The findings were announced in New York by Assistant Inspector John A. Lyons, in command of the Detective Bureau.

You and You Are Cause of Society's Ills!

THIS is a queer, sadly-tangled world we live in, and the best way to give yourself a splitting headache is to try to figure out just who is to blame for the things that go wrong in it. The detective running down a clewless murder case has a soft snap, by comparison; he at least knows that when he gets to the end of the trail he won't be throwing himself behind bars.

Judge Benjamin Scheinman of Los Angeles, Calif., started thinking aloud along these lines the other day. Judge Scheinman presides over the court in which the coppers daily unload their assortment of drunks, vagrants, and other petty offenders—the misfits of metropolitan life for whose infinitely complicated web of mistakes and offenses society can think of no answer but 10 days in the jug.

So the judge unburdened himself to Ted Le Berthon, reporter for the Los Angeles Evening News.

"We may be arresting the wrong people," he mused. "We may be making a mistake in arresting drunks and vags and not arresting those who provide the breeding ground for drunks and vags, and who certainly contribute to their delinquency."

X X X

AND then the judge began trying to figure out just who these contributors to delinquency might be.

He mentioned the sweatshop employers who pay starvation wages; the politicians who decree that jobless single men on relief must get along and stave off the soleracking monotony of idleness on $15 a month; the saloonkeepers who sell liquor to these men, until they are drunk and after they are drunk; the commercial employment agencies that make them pay to get jobs; the flophouse owners who herd men six or eight at a time in dirty ill-ventilated rooms.

All these things added together, the judge remarked, are enough to drive any man to ruin. Dirt, idleness, hopelessness, friendlessness—put them to work on a man, and you need not be surprised if he winds up, frowny and befuddled, in police court.

"There is another angle, too, for us to ponder over," continued the judge. "If you and I voted into office the fellows who later decided that a single man on relief should live on $15 a month, we too, might be subject to arrest."

X X X

IN other words, when you trace the offender's troubles to society you wind up by putting the finger on yourself. For if we live in the kind of society that drives a certain percentage of its misfits to drink and vagrancy, and if we ourselves consent to that society's existence and do nothing to iron out its rough places—then we ourselves are the ultimate offenders.

If you want to keep your mental ease and complacency, never try to discover the ultimate responsibility for society's ills. For, if you do, you may wind up just where Judge Scheinman would up—accusing yourself.

Pass the Mavericks!

CONGRESSMAN Maury Maverick started something when he suggested recently that hors d'oeuvres—those oddments of the dinner table, which few Americans can pronounce and no one can predict—be renamed in simpler form.

Mr. Maverick suggested "dingle doos." But now comes no less a gastronomic authority than George Rector, famous New York restaurateur, to urge that they be called "mavericks" in honor of the congressman.

This, says Mr. Rector, would be fitting for two reasons. First, as a tribute to the congressman; second, because "Maverick" is a good old American word meaning an unbranded stray horse or steer which has wandered off by himself and is any man's for the taking. This, he points out, is perfect description of a tray full of antipasto, canapes, anachovies, and similar odds and ends.

We hope his campaign succeeds. Waiter—a tray of mavericks, if you please.

Persons Over 13 Most Susceptible to Endocarditis, Heart Ailment

(No. 212)

As I have already pointed out, rheumatic fever is the greatest single factor in causing heart disease, particularly in children. Just at the age when rheumatic fever occurs less frequently, another form of heart disease appears.

This may occur in childhood, but is not nearly so frequent in children as it is in those over 13 years of age. From that time its frequency increases steadily until about the middle of the third decade of life, after which the incidence gradually decreases.

This form of heart disease primarily affects the interior of the heart. It is more frequent in persons who have previously had rheumatic fever, but may affect those who have not had the disease.

Endocarditis, or inflammation of the interior of the heart, usually develops in connection with some other disease, such as influenza, septic sore throat, pneumonia, or other severe infections. In each case the germ which causes the inflammation of the heart is one that is responsible for the co-existent infection.

When an infection of the interior of the heart comes on suddenly, the patient has all the usual symptoms of severe infection, including a high fever, chills, and prostration.

In the malignant type of endocarditis, the vast majority of cases end in death. There are, however, other instances in which the infection is mild and a small percentage of these patients do recover.

About 95 per cent of these cases are due to a form of the germ known as the streptococcus viridans. The remaining 5 per cent are caused by other forms of the streptococcus or other germs.

Thus far no specific method of treatment for these infections has been discovered.

Child Inclination Is to Generosity, Not Selfishness

Let us try terribly hard to encourage children in their generousities.

Really the little folk are much more soft-hearted than we are, we who are so full of prejudice and a fearsome stinginess, also.

Try to pass a pencil-man or a street-mint without dropping a coin into the cup, and see if small James won't remind you: "Aren't you going to give the man something, mother?" Try turning away a hungry dog or cat, and expect to escape Mary's tears or John's coaxing. Try to discourage the unkept wolf that one or the other of them brings home to play, and not have their hurt and accusing eyes follow you.

Yes, yes, it's true, of course, what you say, that we simply can't let our hearts run away with our stiff old heads, or our purses, either, but isn't there something rather wonderful to be caught and held in these humane and sympathetic urges of our children?

Can Cultivate Generosity

Parents ask how to cultivate generosity in their children. One answer is to give it freedom. There is a hunger of the soul in all human beings, big or little, to help, to give, to be kind. The selfishness of little children is not related to morality, but to a developing sense of possessiveness, one of the natural, normal complexes. It must, of course, be diverted and not allowed to crowd out other parallel impulses, but much of it is to be expected, as each of us is selfish.

One of the best ways to keep selfishness from dominating is to allow its partner, generosity, to have greater sway. Generosity, contrary to popular opinion, is a natural born characteristic of all children.

The boy wants to lend his new wagon, but when we find that Harry down the street has it, off we march poor Johnny to get it back at once because we're "not buying presents for the neighbors."

Which, although perfectly true, is also going to give our boy the feeling after a while that there is something oddly wrong about doing a fellow a good turn.

Good Impulses Natural

Suzie comes in with two sets of heavy books, one lot of which belongs to Mabel, who had to take her music like creature. They built up that tradition with all the pained innocence of a man down, proceeds to kick the daylight out of him and is surprised and grieved to get bitten on the ankle.

If you would like to read the record of the white man's conquest of the red man, read "The Amerindians," by Donald M. McNicol (Stokes: $2.50). Here it is, in all its glory—and a dark and unlovely tale it makes.

The records Mr. McNicol has dug up are unanimous on one point: that the American Indian was friendly and hospitable to the whites until he found that they proposed to carry him off to slave lands. Then, naturally enough, he began to whet his hatchet. He fought for the best of reasons, and in the main he fought no more cruelly or treacherously than the whites fought.

He killed defenseless women and children? So did the white—from King Philip's War, in the late 1800's, to the final war with the Sioux, in the late 1800's. If he broke treaties, the white broke them first. If he became sly, deceitful, and vengeful, he was only giving back what he received.

Mr. McNicol is hampered by a literary style that seems to have been carved out of wood with a stone tomahawk, but he tells the whole story and presents a picture which might help us to restrain our righteous indignation over Mussolini's brutal descent on the Ethiopians.

Syphilis: A Social Scourge

How the Syphilis Germ Spreads

This is the fourth of six articles on so-called "venereal" diseases, deals with the spread of syphilis and some of the things the disease does NOT do. The series is presented by NEA Service in the nation-wide drive on the disease.

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M. D.

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association

There are some records of syphilis infection by accident when a person with a sore on his finger has come in contact with syphilitic material on the body of another person.

There are records of infection from kissing, and babies have been infected from wet nurses.

These secondary types of infection are, however, so unusual in comparison with the ordinary methods of spread of infection that this fact should not frighten anyone into a constant fear of this disease.

In the vast majority of cases syphilis is transmitted from one human to another during sex relationship.

Hotel beds, public lavatories, bath tubs, door knobs, books, dishes used in restaurants, and similar materials are not easily infected. It is necessary for the germ to get into the body through a sore or through an easily infected spot if it is to invade the body generally.

As has already been said, the organism that causes syphilis is killed by drying and is susceptible to soap and water. Thorough washing is an important factor in preventing the spread of the infection.

The first sign of the disease usually is a sore at the point where the germ has entered the tissue. The doctor who finds this sore will make his diagnosis by studying the material from the sore under the microscope, either fresh or after staining.

He also takes some blood from the veins and tests this blood with what is known as the Wassermann test, or by the Kahn test. These tests determine usually at a fairly early stage whether or not a person has been infected with syphilis.

If the disease is not promptly treated it will spread to the interior of the body, ultimately causing eruption on the skin, and all of the other serious conditions that have been mentioned.

May Be Other Causes

There are a few simple facts that every one ought to know about syphilis.

This disease does not cause pimples. It does not cause itching conditions of the skin.

It may cause ulcers of the legs, but more frequently these are due to varicose veins.

It may be responsible for failure to produce children, but there are also other conditions which may produce such failures.

It is not a form of blood poisoning. Testing of the blood will show whether or not the patient has syphilis.

It is not responsible for the vast majority of cases of baldness, but some cases of loss of hair not only of the head but of the entire body may be due to syphilis.

It has not been established in any way that syphilis is the cause of cancer or that these two conditions are in them two or three times a day. If they are not in good condition, have them attended to by a dentist. But when you go to him, tell him that you have syphilis.

Don't Spread Trouble
Do not have sexual intercourse until you are told by your physician that you are no longer contagious. It will interfere with the cure of the disease, and it is criminal, for it is likely to give the disease to your wife.

You must not marry until you have the doctor's consent, which cannot be properly given until at least two years have passed after cure seems complete. If you do, you run the risk of infecting your wife and your children with syphilis.

Early in the course of syphilis, while it is contagious, the greatest danger of infecting other people is by the mouth. Because of this danger, do not kiss anybody. Particularly, do not endanger children by kissing them.

Do not allow anything that has been in contact with your lips or that has been in your mouth to be left around to that anybody can use it before it has been cleaned. This applies to cups, glasses, knives, forks, spoons, pipes, cigars, toothpicks, and all such things. It is better to use your own towels, brushes, comb, razor, or soap, etc., though these are much less likely to be contaminated than objects that go in your mouth.

If you have any open sores—you will not have any after the first week or two, if you are treated—everything that comes in contact with them should be destroyed or disinfected.

Yesterday, Hendry closes his $40,000 deal with Norton and the cash is brought to Hendry's home, awaiting payment. Sybil (Joan's niece) with the information that Philip has just unearched "some choice gossip" in San Francisco.

CHAPTER XX

FOR the first few moments following Sybil's announcement, Joan wanted to get up and run from the house. Her heart died within her breast, and she prayed that a bolt from the sky might kill her, too. Yet she managed to hold herself terribly calm, as if these were her last minutes on earth, and she had to go out with dignity.

If only Bob might get on the train to Washington first . . .
At the moment, however, he was mildly curious.

"So Philip is in San Francisco," he remarked. "He seems to have a pretty wide territory for his survey. What's the gossip, Sybil?"
Sybil laughed with delight. "Oh,
I can't tell you, Bob," she said
archly. "Not yet."

Joan breathed with infinite relief. Perhaps, she thought, she will make a bargain with me. A bargain wherein I shall promise to disappear in return for her silence.
If she plans to do that, then she will not speak of it now. She will wait until Bob has gone. She will wait.

As the minutes slowly passed and Sybil said no more, Joan was sure that was her intention. What she could not guess was that Philip had merely phoned from his hotel in San Francisco to announce his arrival in that city, following the train. "I'm getting warmer," he had said. "It won't be long now."
And Sybil had amplified his words to amuse herself.

FINALLY it was 10 o'clock and Bob was preparing to go, and Joan and Sybil were exchanging good night pleasantries in meaningless but adequate phrases. Even in the few minutes that she was alone with Sybil upstairs in the rose and silver boudoir there was nothing said. Not even when Sybil graciously retrieved the black kid gloves Joan had dropped, and her hands met—Sybil's burning and feverish, and Joan's cold and clammy as death. Whatever was feature of the program was the song,

"The Old Spinning Wheel" sung by Mrs.
Dick Watkins, with Mrs. J. G. Martindale accompanying. The June meeting will be held as a Flad Day celebration, with the Prescott chapter as hostess, at which time the Texarkana chapter, the Hope chapter, and the DeQueen chapter will be guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Duckett and son William have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. William Glover in Malvern.

In Sybil's mind, she gave no hint of it. She murmured only, to cover the confusion of the moment:
"What lovely gloves, Joan! I like the petit-point trimming . . ."

Driving the few blocks to the Inn in Bob's roadster, Joan said her silent farewell to him. The words she might have said—the words which might have expressed the depth of her love for him—she could not bring to her lips.

Bob chatted on, all oblivious to the tumult within her, because now, after she had steeled herself to meet the first shock, she found that her actions obeyed her will more easily.

THEY found Mr. Hendry and Norton in the grill, chatting amiably over brandy and soda.
And even with the pressure of her own tragedy overwhelming her, Joan felt a moment of concern lest the two men become a little gar-rulous and drop some careless remark about the money in Mr. Hen-dry's possession.

Norton's words, as she and Bob came upon them, gave rise to a greater foundation for her fears.

. . . in those days, you old softie," he was saying to Mr. Hendry, "we thought nothing of having our entire fortune in our pocket-—a few gold nuggets tied up in a dirty handkerchief. All this talk of thieves and robbers—bosh!
Don't be an old woman, John! He laughed boisterously, and his manner attracted attention.

He rose quickly and gallantly, however, as he saw Joan approaching their table.

"If it isn't our little Sunshine Girl!" he said blusteringly. "Ask her to join us, John. I don't have a convincing way with the ladies.
Here's a chair, my dear!" He drew it out for her with exaggerated chivalry. Then, seeing Bob in her wake, he added carelessly: "Oh, hello, Andrews."

"Hello, Mr. Norton. I wonder if I might leave Miss Barrett with you for just a moment while I talk to Mr. Hendry?"

"Nothing would please more," Norton smiled with satisfaction, and he resumed his seat quickly.
"Run along, both of you, and don't hurry back!"

"Nonsense!" Mr. Hendry objected. "Bring up a chair, Bob."
"We'll thrash our problems out right here. Bless my soul, I never had a secret from Charley Norton.
Never in my life. Now, about this Washington business."

Bob rose presently, consulting his watch.
"It's nearly 10:30," he remarked.
"I've just time to run upstairs and throw a few things into a bag.
I must catch that 11:10 train from here in order to make con-returned from Little Rock, where Dr.

nections at Pennsylvania station."
After Bob left them, Norton also considered the time.

"John," he said presently, "I think I might as well get that 11:10 train, too."

"Don't do that, Charley," Hendry objected. "Why not stay in Green Hills for the night? I can put you up."

"No, thanks, John. I get to New York seldom enough, and when I do I like to sleep with Broadway ringing in my ears. Unless," he added, "you need a stout feller like me for protection tonight!"
He laughed insinuatingly.
"Shush, Charley! You're a reckless fool!"

AT that moment, as if in answer to her silent wish, Joan heard the merry laugh of Dorothy Stark in the corridor beyond the grill.
The next instant, Dorothy entered.
Joan waved to her.

"Will you excuse me, Mr. Hendry?" she pleaded. "It is my friend, as I thought, 'I'd like to speak to her a moment . . .'"

"Run along, my dear. Run along."

Joan's panic was mirrored in her face as she dragged Dorothy off to a deserted corner of the dressing room.

"It's Sybil," Joan whispered.
"She knows. She knows everything."

"Who said so?"

"She did—practically." Joan repeated Sybil's peculiar remarks about Philip's secret survey. "I'm sure it has to do with me, Dorothy.
He went to Chicago first—then to Seattle. That seems more than coincidence. And tonight he called up from San Francisco with some choice gossip. Those were Sybil's exact words . . ."

"That doesn't prove anything," Dorothy said severely. But she was frowning, nevertheless.
"Where's Bob now?"

"Upstairs, packing a bag. He's leaving for Washington immediately. Dorothy, that's the only thing I'm grateful for. He doesn't know yet. He won't know—until I've gone . . ."

Dorothy's frown deepened, but she realized that this was not the moment to argue.

"Keep your chin up, Joan," she said instead, "until we put Bob safely on the train. Or would you rather be alone?"

"No, come to the station with us. That Mr. Norton is taking the same train, too. We wouldn't be alone anyway."

"All right. I will. Come now, you need powder on your nose.
And a little lipstick—Joan, even your lips are white! Darling, don't tremble so . . ."

ROYAL RIFT THREATENS THRONE

EVER since King Carol of Rumania ascended the throne in 1930, he was the butt of violent opposition by the Iron Guard, a Fascist organization which objected to the king's persistent love affair with Mme. Magda Lupescu, a Jewess. It was for love of this ravishing red-head that, in 1928, Carol renounced his right of succession to the throne, and left the way open for his son by his legal wife, the former Princess Helen of Greece, to become king.

Yet, faced by a similar situation involving his brother Nicholas, who refused to renounce his romance with a commoner, Carol turned the other way. He ousted Nicholas from the royal family, and as a result had to face another storm of protest by the Iron Guard. The Magda Lupescu affair was revived, the Iron Guard became bolder in its opposition to the king, and at one time it was feared that Carol's hold on the throne had weakened. But Nicholas came to his rescue with assurance that he had no part in the action of the Iron Guard.

The incident again recalls the fiery career of King Carol of Rumania, whose portrait appears on several stamps of that country. One is shown here.

Always give "burn" an experimental "no" even though you might want to say "yes." Then wait a few days; if your answer makes you feel relieved you have done the right thing.—Rev. H. M. Wells, Cleveland, O., advising girls on the first proposal of marriage.

Now, you're entirely too old to be coming here for a divorce. Go right home and try to fix things up with your wife.—Judge J. Lupe, Chicago, advising Theodore Kohn, 81, in his divorce suit.

I have red hair and five of my children were red-haired. The five red-heads still are alive, but my five other children, who were dark-haired, died young or in middle age.—Mrs. Sarah Wormer, Denver, Colo., who is convinced that redheads live longer.

Bride May Offer Gift Suggestions

Joan Durham Writes About Etiquette Surrounding Weddings

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

The wise bride-to-be will make up her mind about color schemes and silver and china patterns almost as soon as she makes up her mind to say yes.

For the minute she announces her engagement her friends will begin making plans for showers. And if she doesn't have some sort of color and pattern selections, she'll soon find herself deluged with a heterogeneous collection of lime green and Aztec Red bathroom accessories and kitchen utensils of every color in the culinary spectrum.

It is not only proper but wise for friends to ask either the bride herself or her mother about color and pattern preferences. They, in turn, may be referred to the local department stores and specialty shops.

The bride's immediate family, however, should not give showers in her honor. They may bear the expenses of showers given in homes of friends. But it is in better taste for others actually to give the showers, since gifts are expected.

Guests invited to attend such functions, of course, should be good friends of the bride. If an old friend of the bride wishes to entertain for her in a community in which she is not well known, it is best to give a tea or buffet supper or some other function which does not require gifts.

Men Join Group Later

Because of the personal nature of the gifts presented in many cases, it has become customary for women only to be invited to showers. But husbands and masculine friends may be asked to join the group after the shower is over. This is often true of evening parties.

Sometimes the group which plans the shower will stipulate the maximum amount to be spent on the gift—especially when all the money is to be spent on one gift. Such arrangements are not wise unless all those invited to attend are very close friends and there is no possibility of overstepping financial limits in individual cases. For such limitations may make it impossible for some guests to attend—something the bride would regret very much if she knew about it.

Sometimes, too, those who attend showers are under the impression that gifts presented then are substitutes for wedding gifts. Guests at either or both affairs, however, should bring or send gifts for each.

At one time, the tea plant was grown experimentally in South Carolina, but it did not become profitable because the labor cost there was so much higher than in the Orient.

Lightning "Snap" Now Is Pictured

Crackle in Radio Actually Precedes Flash in Clouds

NEW YORK — The "snap" that lightning makes in your radio has been photographed, as it emerged from a cloud miles distant. Electrical waves, invisible to the eye, make the noise preceding the flash.

The waves were discovered with an oscillograph by F. W. Chapman, and reported in Nature, the British official science journal. The pictures showed something new—sixty-three electrical waves in a single lightning flash.

Previously movie cameras have caught the visible lightning, and showed that what the eye sees as one streak of flame, may be a dozen "darts" and rivulets of fire.

The new oscillograph pictures show that lightning is like the bursting of a dam, with invisible electric "spray" flying in all directions. Tests showed that radio noise preceded the visible flash.

Gland Transfers Work at Prison

6,000 Experiments at San Quentin Produce Good Results

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—Six thousand gland transplantations have been on inmates of the California State prison here, most of them with beneficial results.

While the furor over "rejuvenation" has raged and abated in the outside world, Dr. Leo L. Stanley, resident physician, has been pursuing his experiments quietly behind the walls of the nation's largest prison and making guarded reports to the medical profession.

Today, nearly 20 years after his first gland operation on a 71-year-old convict, the opinion of his colleagues is that "he's got something."

Relieves Ailments

Corroboration comes from the prisoners themselves. There is a constant waiting list of men who want to undergo an operation as soon as the next glands arrive from an abattoir. They've seen the results on previous patients. Restoration of youthful vigor is not the aim of Dr. Stanley's experiments, although it is an incidental effect in many cases. Overemphasis on this phase of gland study, he feels, has brought the subject into unwarranted disrepute. The aim rather has been to relieve definite ailments and, in impressive, though by no means unanimous, benefits have been observed in cases of general asthenia, rheumatism, neurasthenia, poor vision, asthma, diabetes and other maladies.

The earliest experiments savored of the gruesome. When no one claimed the body of an executed murderer, the latter's interstitial glands were removed whole and grafted to the patient.

The results were promising. Dr. Stanley then switched to ram's glands and experimented with various ways of transplanting them. The technique as now developed consists of reducing them to a paste and injecting seven or eight cubic centimetres of the substance under the skin of the patient's abdomen.

Novocaine makes the operation painless and the convict can walk out of the operating room to his usual duties.

Repeats Every 3 Months

"The time the beneficial effects last varies," says Dr. Stanley. "Usually one treatment every two or three months is considered adequate."

"We do not make any claim that this procedure will increase longevity. That would be hard to establish. But we feel that anyone who enjoys good health and vigor and a general sense of well-being—and these are the common results of such transplantations—will outlive a person with opposite characteristics."

In private practice, Dr. Stanley has performed such operations on both men and women. A definite study of

Says Sitting Bar to Citizenship

To Circuit Judge W. R. Hunter, above, of Kankakee, Ill., belief in the sitdown strike is a "form of anarchy" and should constitute a bar to citizenship. Examining applicants for naturalization, Judge Hunter asked opinions of sitdowns, warning "such strikers are violating the law. They're anarchists and can and should be punished." No applicant professed belief in sit-downs.
